

Running an effective strike

Dear brothers and sisters,

For centuries, workers have withdrawn their labour to pressure their employers to improve wages and working conditions. Some strikes have achieved their goals; some have not. All have provided valuable lessons on how to strike effectively.

An effective strike depends on thoughtful strategy, strong solidarity, intelligent organization, and well-defined roles for all participants. The OPSEU strike policy aims to provide clear rules and guidance in each of these areas.

Our strike policy makes no distinction between legal and illegal strikes, continuous strikes, rotating strikes or lockouts.

OPSEU adopted a new strike policy at its 2003 Convention. It is the result of a lot of effective strike experience. Our first province-wide walkout was the 1979 one by college support staff. The Ontario Public Service had the biggest strike in Ontario history in 1996, and repeated it in 2002. We've also had our fair share of smaller strikes in the Broader Public Service. College faculty struck twice in the 1980s and most recently, in 2006.

These actions have resulted in important victories for our members, stronger contracts and better public services.

And we've learned with each one of them. We've learned how to do it better, and we've learned that defending our contracts builds our strength and solidarity.

This strike manual reflects all of this experience.

In this manual you will find concrete tips and ideas for mobilizing members and for the day-to-day running of strikes. We also have all the forms required for running an effective strike and managing local strike finances.

This manual is geared specifically to our members who bargain under the Colleges Collective Bargaining Act (the CCBA). It applies to the faculty bargaining unit members who work across Ontario in the Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology.

One of the most important aspects of winning a strike is avoiding the need for it in the first place. So in addition to the sections on running a strong strike, this manual includes a large section on pre-strike mobilizing.

When everyone knows that the strike threat is real, then the pressure is on the employer to come up with the best offer possible so that a strike will not be necessary. Making the threat of a strike serious is the job of strike preparation.

It's hard work, but not nearly as hard as being on strike – and the pay is much better.

I believe that this new manual will help faculty across the province to give their bargaining team the support they need to come back with a strong contract.

Bargaining under the CCBA: the legal framework

This strike manual, for members bargaining under the Colleges Collective Bargaining Act, is based directly on the OPSEU strike policy. It omits references that do not apply under the CCBA, and expands on areas where the CCBA differs from other bargaining legislation.

Under the CCBA, OPSEU negotiates with the Colleges Compensation and Appointments Council. With the legislative amendments of 2008, this council is replaced by a College Employer Council after April 1, 2010. These changes can be found in the CCBA, 2008 and the Ontario Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology Act.

Members decide

Bargaining begins with a pre-bargaining conference meeting of the local presidents and the members of the divisional executive. The purpose of the pre-bargaining conference is to identify a number of broadly-based issues that are relevant to the upcoming round of negotiations and to provide guidance and recommendations to the local demand-setting meetings.

At the local demand-setting meetings, local members examine the issues that were discussed and prioritized by the pre-bargaining conference. They vote on them and decide which have the highest priority,

After all the college locals have had an opportunity to set their local demands, a provincial demand-setting meeting brings delegates from all the colleges together to pool the results of the local meetings and create a list of central demands, again with priority rankings. This final demand-setting meeting also elects a bargaining team, with seven members and two alternates. The bargaining team, in turn, elects its own chair and vice-chair.

The elected bargaining team, with support from OPSEU staff, develops its own bargaining strategy at the provincial level.

The CAAT-A bargaining team. Team members (from left to right) are: Sheila Bell, OPSEU Local 354, Durham College; Jeff Arbus (vice-chair), Local 613, Sault College; Daniel Bouchard, Local 673, Collège Boréal; Rodney Bain, Local 415, Algonquin College; Benoit Dupuis, Local 470, La cité collégiale; Damian Wiechula, Local 556, George Brown College; Ted Montgomery (chair), Local 560, Seneca College.

Bargaining can begin before the collective agreement expires, after notice to bargain has been given. Under the legislation, this notice can be given within the period of 90 days before the collective agreement expires. Bargaining continues up to and following conciliation, and after a strike vote, right up to a strike deadline. And after a strike begins, bargaining again takes place until a settlement is reached.

The CCBA sets out its own series of steps which must occur before a legal strike or lockout can take place.

In the case of a strike, they are:

- The previous contract must have expired;
- The conciliation officer has notified the Minister that the parties have not been able to reach an agreement and the Minister has notified the parties of this by letter;
- The members must have voted in favour of a strike in a secret ballot vote supervised by the OLRB ;
- The union has given the employer five days notice of the strike deadline; and
- 16 days have elapsed after the date on the Minister's notice.

A strike vote does not mean that workers will automatically go on strike. Rather, it gives the bargaining team the authority to call a strike if necessary to achieve an acceptable collective agreement. A strong strike vote increases pressure on the employer to bargain seriously with the union team.

A lockout is the other side of the strike coin. It happens when an employer decides to close all operations, cutting off income for union members in the hope that their union will cave in.

Calling a strike

Calling a strike is never the goal of any bargaining team. The union's goal throughout the process is to negotiate a good contract. No one likes being on strike, but sometimes it is the only way to get members the collective agreement they need.

A lockout is the other side of the strike coin. It happens when an employer decides to close all operations, cutting off income for union members in the hope that their union will cave in.

Pre-strike preparations

For the employer to lockout out the bargaining unit members, the following steps must have been met:

- The previous contract must have expired;
- The conciliation officer has notified the Minister that the parties have not been able to reach an agreement and the Minister has notified the parties of this by letter;
- The employer has given the union five days notice of the intended lockout; and
- 16 days have elapsed after the date on the Minister's notice.

Sometimes media and public opinion can be more sympathetic in the case of a lockout, but others will blame the union for forcing it.

A lot of factors go into organizing and winning a strike, but the most important one of all is the strength of the members.

Long before a strike deadline, we need to have our members involved. Distributing bulletins in the workplace, talking to members about contract issues, organizing barbecues and lunch-hour protests, wearing union buttons and so on all bring our members into the process.

Selecting picket captains, setting up a strike headquarters, and having a day to register members for strike duties all send serious signals to management.

Most union members become more interested at contract time. Many who are normally apathetic will take action because they know that their future is at stake. So strike preparation is a good time to make sure that everyone has signed a union card – no strike pay unless you have!

It's also a good opportunity to connect with all members individually, to make sure they understand the union and how it works, to answer questions, and to give them a chance to participate.

Strike preparation also assures members that the union knows what it is doing. They see that the union is ready to take on the employer if it has to, and that gives them confidence that the union can and will protect their interests.

Start early

Each local is responsible for its own strike preparation, with help from OPSEU staff representatives. Planning and preparation take a lot of time, particularly in large locals. Often, the union will book off members to help with mobilizing, sharing information, and generating interest and awareness.

Planning and preparation should begin early, long before the bargaining team calls for member support. If a strike cannot be avoided, the local has to be ready to lead the members in the strike, and to plan and carry out the full range of strike activities.

Getting ready involves the Local Executive Committee, stewards, OPSEU staff representatives and regular members who hold no office in the union. There is plenty of work to be done and all volunteers should be encouraged. Many different skills come into play when a union goes on strike. Everyone is important.

Show solidarity

Any activity that shows that the members are prepared to take organized action will help the bargaining team achieve a good settlement.

Sometimes the bargaining team will suggest an activity, such as a button day, or a day when everyone is asked to wear clothing of the same colour. But the local can also organize activities to show that members are united in their desire for a good contract.

The point is to get as many people as possible to participate. Plan your event to be inclusive, and plan it for a time that is convenient for the maximum number of members. The options are endless:

- a large demonstration;
- a petition on a bargaining issue;
- having members assemble before coming in to work, and all walking in together;
- collecting money for a worthy cause;
- a barbecue;
- a rally;
- a mass meeting with a special speaker;
- a workplace educational on bargaining;
- a coffee break to explain a specific issue.

Show your support

Our collective agreement is an extremely valuable asset. It sets out our contractual relationship with our employer. The most important contribution union members can make to their own working future is to support their bargaining team in the drive for a better contract.

Every article in the contract has been negotiated over the years with the Council. Many were “paid for” by giving up something else. Nothing is there because the employer decided to be nice. None of it was free.

We go into bargaining to build on the work of past bargaining teams. We go to get improvements, to protect what we have, and to adapt the collective agreement to changing times. We elect our bargaining team and send its members to meet with the employer to get what we need.

But they can't do it alone.

By themselves, seven people don't have much bargaining clout. Their ability to achieve a good contract depends on the thousands of members who sent them in to do the job. Our visible and enthusiastic support will pay off in the contract we get.

Support means being prepared to act. In the final analysis, it means being prepared to strike if necessary.

Walking away from our classes to take up picket signs is a serious action with consequences for us and the Colleges. That's what makes it a powerful incentive for both sides to reach a settlement without a strike. And of course, that's the goal. But solid strike preparation is essential to reaching that goal.

The employer looks around our workplaces to get an idea of what union members are thinking as bargaining moves into a serious phase. If what they see tells them that nobody cares about the contract and the union isn't in a position to pull off a strike, they know they can play hardball at the table.

On the other hand, if managers see people signing up for picket duty, huge turnouts at union barbecues, union buttons and T-shirts, posters on bulletin boards, and lunchrooms buzzing with union talk, then they send a different message to the employer bargaining team: “Be careful. These folks are serious.”

Being ready for a strike doesn't mean you are going to do it, just like buying home insurance doesn't mean you plan to burn the place down. It's a question of being prudent — and prepared.

Be creative and design something that people will have fun doing. It helps to provide refreshments!

A spate of grievances involving an issue on the bargaining table can remind management that members are unhappy with the status quo. An information picket – not designed to keep people from entering the workplace – can be a great way to attract attention and hand out a leaflet explaining the state of contract talks.

Build your internal communications

In the event of a strike, you are going to have to be able to reach people quickly. E-mail is fast, but many members do not have e-mail or don't check it often. Phone trees are a fast, personal, and effective way to get a message sent.

Ideally, nobody has more than about 10 people to call, and the network reaches everyone at their home. Phone trees work best with short and simple messages. If you have a more complex message to get across, use the tree to direct people to the full message – at a meeting, on the bulletin board, or on the OPSEU web site.

The strength of the phone tree is that everyone in the local is connected. Nobody feels left out.

Communications from the bargaining team come through the web site, e-mail, and bulk distribution of bargaining bulletins. Member mobilizers can help to make sure that these messages reach all the members.

The local is responsible for setting up an effective internal communications network. It's important to have contacts at all work sites, and to be able to reach them. A work area without computers won't get the e-mail and website messages. Someone has to print things off and deliver them.

An effective communication network is the best way to answer members' questions and to keep them informed.

Locals can help the effort by making sure that the central union has an accurate and up-to-date list of all stewards with their phone and

Don't spread rumours

Reaching out to all members is an important way of keeping rumours in check. Whenever bargaining gets serious, rumours start circulating. Some are generated by management or the news media, but most are just idle speculation.

Communication from a bargaining team cannot give you every exchange across the table. When the bargaining team has information to share, you will find it in the 2010 Bargaining Bulletin, available on the OPSEU web site at http://www.opseu.org/caat/caat_ac/2009Bargaining/negotiationnews/index.htm

Regular reports from bargaining teams are an important part of OPSEU's approach to negotiations. They keep you up-to-date on the key issues and the general tone of bargaining.

If you hear a rumour, don't spread it. Check it out with someone in a position to know. Check the web site. Make sure your information is accurate.

Locals must have contact people throughout their workplaces who can take information from the web site and share it with their colleagues.

fax numbers and e-mail addresses. Home e-mail addresses are particularly important. (In the event of a strike, nobody has access to their e-mail at work!)

In fact, strike preparation is the ideal time to update the listing of all members of the local, gathering again the contact information to be able to reach them in the event of a strike. Stewards should collect this information from the people they represent. Again, member mobilizers can help co-ordinate this activity.

In the lead-up to a strike, stewards are the link between members and the bargaining team.

They should keep members informed, distribute bulletins, and listen to the questions and concerns that members raise. Feed those questions back to the bargaining team, through the LEC, so the team will know what members are thinking and feeling.

Let people know that they can get e-mail directly from the union if they provide OPSEU with their name, local number and e-mail address. Call OPSEUdirect at 1-800-268-7376.

Strength in solidarity

Strike action is collective action. During a strike by any OPSEU bargaining unit, it's the job of union leaders at every level to strengthen the strike by building solidarity:

- among striking members;
- between striking members and non-striking OPSEU members;
- between striking members and the labour movement;
- between striking members and the users of the service they provide; and
- between striking members and the community at large.

The members, bargaining teams, strike committees, and other OPSEU bodies must work co-operatively and act in concert at all times.

Except for essential and emergency services workers, which are not a factor under the Colleges Collective Bargaining Act, no member of a striking bargaining unit shall perform bargaining unit work or cross a picket line.

OPSEU does not support any attempt to break a legal strike. OPSEU will not condone or support the actions of any workers who engage in strikebreaking.

Strategy and tactics

Under OPSEU policy, no OPSEU bargaining unit should strike without first analyzing the forces working for and against it in the current round of bargaining. This means the members and their allies, the employer and its allies, service users, the community, the news media, municipal and provincial politicians, current events, and so on.

Well before any strike, the bargaining unit should do as much as possible to build co-operative relationships with potential allies.

Strike Committees, Area Coordinating Groups, and the Provincial Coordinating Group should develop strike strategies and tactics appropriate to their level. It is the duty of Strike Committees to work in concert to implement these strategies and tactics. The goal of strike strategy is to support the bargaining strategy.

In any strike, striking bargaining units must make sure that the withdrawal of services is as complete as possible. At the same time, they should make sure that the strike activities used are the ones that have the greatest impact on the employer.

A strike withdraws services; it also frees up resources. People on strike have the time and the motivation to take part in activities that would otherwise be very difficult. Thus, strike duties may include:

- picketing;
- lobbying of MPPs, local politicians, directors of employer organizations, and the employer's allies;
- outreach to service users and groups that represent them;
- outreach to labour, community, and other potential allies;
- mass rallies and demonstrations;
- media relations work and advertising; and
- any other activities that help end the strike with the desired result.

The goal of any strike is to get the best possible result at the lowest possible cost to members and the union. Bargaining units should make every effort to get the desired results without a strike.

The activities listed above can be just as effective before a strike as they are during a strike. Every bargaining unit should mobilize its members to take action well ahead of the strike deadline. To this end, a mobilization committee shall be organized at the local, area, or provincial level. This committee may become or merge with the strike committee or coordinating group at each level as strike preparations begin.

Roles and structures

The Members

All members of a striking bargaining unit are expected to perform strike duties as assigned by their Strike Committee.

The Bargaining Team

It is the job of the elected bargaining team to bargain collective agreements. To guide negotiations, bargaining teams shall consult regularly with members, the Strike Committees, Area Coordinating Groups, and/or the Provincial Coordinating Group where applicable.

The Provincial Coordinating Group (PCG)

The PCG is responsible for providing overall strategic direction and making decisions around the activities of striking bargaining unit members. The PCG is made up of:

- the President and First Vice-President/Treasurer of OPSEU;
- the chair(s) and vice-chair(s) of the bargaining team(s);
- staff and additional members as assigned; and
- Executive Board Member(s) as assigned.

Area Coordinating Groups (ACGs)

OPSEU policy directs striking locals within a geographical area to work together to coordinate strike activities. Locals may form “Area Coordinating Groups” (also known as “clusters”) to do this work.

ACGs work to implement the decisions of the Provincial Coordinating Group to strengthen the strike. Assigned staff and Executive Board Members from the region provide help, support, and direction to the ACGs as needed.

Reasonable costs for the work and activities of the ACGs (meetings, conference calls, transportation, etc.) will be paid by the central union where authorized by OPSEU staff representatives.

Where practical and useful, ACGs may establish area-level versions of any of the strike sub-committees, including the Hardship Relief Committee.

The Strike Committee at the local level

The Local Executive Committee (LEC) shall establish a Strike Committee. The LEC should be the nucleus of the committee, but it may include other stewards, member mobilizers and the OPSEU staff representative. If there are worksites that are not represented on the LEC, people from those areas should be pulled onto the Strike Committee.

The Strike Committee is responsible for conducting a strike at the local level.

That means deciding what tactics suggested by the bargaining team will work locally, and how best to put pressure on the employer to settle. It means making sure that all the preparation has been done, that members are fully aware of what is going on, and that management is clear that the members are serious about negotiations.

It includes analyzing the local geography and deciding the best locations for picket lines, and dealing with any safety problems around line locations.

Every Strike Committee must establish sub-committees to deal with strike duties, strike finances and strike communications. Where the Strike Committee receives one or more requests for hardship relief (see below), the Strike Committee must also establish a Hardship Relief Committee.

Sub-committee chairs should sit on the Strike Committee to keep the lines of communication open. The Strike Committee remains responsible for ensuring these tasks are handled effectively.

Tips for selecting committee members

- Make sure committee members clearly understand the job of their committees and how it relates to the overall work.
 - Search out stewards and members who are competent, energetic, show an interest, or have experience.
 - Involve new people. In most cases, there is too much work for the core of local leaders to handle. Mobilizing around contract talks is a good opportunity to recruit new activists because of the wide variety of tasks and heightened feeling of group spirit.
 - Committees should reflect the makeup of the work force, with a good balance by department, type of job, seniority, age, gender, race, ability and ethnic background. This balance will help ensure that the union's strategy accurately reflects the membership's concerns, and that we have the greatest possible support from the members.
- Discuss assignments committee members have taken on and how other workers could help with those tasks.
 - Maintain a system for accountability and support. Spell out each task clearly, including a target date for completion.
 - Check with committee members to see how their work is going. Otherwise, we may not discover they need help until it is too late.
 - Make sure each person knows what everyone else is doing.
 - Have committee members give progress reports. This should be an opportunity to share ideas and to decide what to do if plans are not working as expected.
 - Hold people accountable for getting the job done.

Tips on committee operations

- Start planning early – weeks before any strike deadline.
- Don't call a meeting unless there's a purpose. Meetings need not be long but should be held daily in the early stages of a strike.
- Each sub-committee must report daily to the Strike Committee.
- Try to keep the same members on committees during the strike.
- Meetings should include a report on progress and a search for solutions to problems arising.
- Teach people how to get other workers to help them. Without training, committee members may try to do everything themselves, either because they think it is their job, it seems easier, or they don't know how to ask for help.

Strike Duties sub-committee

OPSEU policy says that the Strike Duties sub-committee shall:

- make sure that all striking members are assigned strike duties to implement strike strategy;
- work with the Strike Finance sub-committee to make sure that all striking members have the supports they need (e.g., accommodation for members unable to perform normal strike duties, headquarters if necessary, equipment, materials) to perform their strike duties effectively;
- assign and train Picket Captains to provide on-the-ground leadership and administrative support for members performing strike duties; and
- provide leadership and support to Picket Captains and members to implement strike strategy.

The Strike Duties sub-committee sets up strike headquarters and rest areas, organizes picket teams and deals with logistics.

It also handles relations with the police.

Headquarters

Local strike headquarters should be an information centre for members as well as the meeting place for strike administration.

If it's close to the picket lines, it can also be a rest place for pickets. Mobile construction trailers with washrooms are ideal. Sometimes parking lots will rent spaces for strike trailers.

You will also need electricity, either by wire or generator, to run the lights, coffee maker, a computer and printer. You will need access to a phone line and if possible a fax machine.

Photocopying is important, and you will need the usual office supplies – paper, pens, stapler and so on, as well as picket signs, string, a staple gun, and a megaphone.

Telephones

The telephone is a vital strike tool.

It helps if each picket line has a cell phone. You need a list of all members' home phone numbers, and stewards and Picket Captains should have their own lists of their teams.

Set up teams to answer phones and relay messages. Use message pads to prevent messages from going astray.

Picketing

The purpose of picketing is:

- to inform the public that there is a strike;
- to discourage people from entering the struck premises;
- to cut off the flow of materials into or out of the struck worksite;
- to inform union members who may not yet be aware of the strike.

Picket Captains

Picket Captains report to the Strike Duties sub-committee and are responsible for maintaining picket lines at worksites. They should be respected, experienced union stewards or workplace leaders.

Locals or OPSEU staff representatives may stage a training session for Picket Captains to stress our responsibility to maintain a strong picket line, maintain order and report on incidents, monitor picket attendance, and respond to questions from workers.

Enlist Picket Captains well in advance of the strike deadline to map their worksites and contact members for picket duty. That way, all members will become aware of the strike deadline – and budget accordingly.

Picket Captains should meet regularly in the weeks before the strike to discuss worksite logistics and set up a shift schedule.

Make sure there are enough Picket Captains for all shifts at all worksites. Pickets are normally assigned a four-hour shift, but this may vary according to circumstances, specific strike activities, and the number of pickets.

If a strike or lockout occurs, picket lines should be established at all campuses. The Strike Duties Sub-committee should determine the numbers of pickets at each site.

Preparing for a strike

Map your worksites, including all entrances and driveways, to help plan picket sites. Some of this information may be garnered from health and safety committee members.

Plan picket schedules and contact your picket team members long before the strike deadline. Advise members about the possibility of strike action and ask them to adjust their household budgets, plan for contingencies, etc.

Tips for scheduling pickets

- Share the burden fairly.
- Take family responsibilities into account to the extent possible. Find alternative tasks or committee work for people with special needs or disabilities who may not be able to picket.
- Use natural social groupings (people who know each other and work together, for example) so picket line duty will be more pleasant. On the other hand, picket duty can be an opportunity to make people from one department or work area more familiar with the concerns of workers from other areas.
- Mix more-experienced and less-experienced union members to ensure that individuals who can provide leadership are always present.
- Make arrangements for pickets who need transportation to the site.

Accommodation

All members of a striking bargaining unit have the right to participate fully in the strike. However, some members may not be able to perform all strike duties. In such cases, the Strike Committee has a legal and moral obligation to modify the member's strike duties to enable him or her to earn strike pay. This is called "accommodation."

The Human Rights Code may require accommodation so as not to discriminate on the basis of the prohibited grounds.

Members have a duty to inform their Strike Committee if they need to be accommodated. Members seeking accommodation also have a duty to cooperate in finding accommodation solutions.

Accommodation requests are confidential. A member of the Strike Duties sub-committee shall be assigned to deal with these requests.

Accommodation must be provided in a manner that respects the dignity of the person. This includes the way accommodation is provided and the individual's participation in the process.

The Strike Committee should respond to accommodation requests in a timely fashion and make sure that the accommodation continues until the member no longer needs it.

Members who feel they are not being accommodated may seek help from their regional harassment and discrimination advisors and their OPSEU Regional Vice-President. OPSEU's Harassment and Discrimination policy provides a process for filing and resolving complaints.

No member shall be denied strike pay because the Strike Committee cannot provide alternate duties.

Picket Captain's pre-strike checklist

- Compile a list of all members at the worksite, with their home phone numbers.
- Approach all non-members to sign union cards.
- Meet with other Picket Captains to set up schedules and discuss worksite logistics.
- Identify nearby coffee shops, rest rooms, pay phones, and sheltered rest areas. If a rented portable toilet is necessary, tell the Strike Duties Sub-committee.
- Set up a schedule of pickets and call each person on the picket team.

Picket Captain's on-strike checklist

- Train pickets on the schedule, guidelines for conduct on the picket line, and the need to refer reporters or any other visitors to others designated for that purpose.
- Make sure that picket signs and food are at the right location at the right time.
- Be spokesperson on the line to the media and the public, or refer media to Strike Headquarters.
- Maintain communications with police who may be called to the lines.
- Keep accurate records on who fulfills their picket duty, a requirement for receiving strike benefits. Picket Captains must help complete the strike duty record form. This form must be signed by the chair of the Strike Finance sub-committee and forwarded to OPSEU Accounting.
- Make sure that the picket line always has access to a camera in case you need independent evidence of incidents or employer tactics.
- Encourage part-time workers and students to support the strike.
- Report to Strike Headquarters by phone or in person after every picketing shift.

Problems on the picket line

- Disorderly Conduct. Alcohol and drugs are prohibited on picket lines. Picket Captains have total authority to remove people on the line who engage in improper conduct. At the same time, complaints about Picket Captains should be reported to the Strike Duties sub-committee, investigated, and resolved quickly before morale is affected.
- Pickets should pick a captain if for some reason their designated captain does not appear.
- Abuse or insults. Pickets should not respond to abuse or insults from anyone. Be firm in asking people not to cross the picket lines. Picket Captains will determine who is allowed to cross.
- Deliveries. Many truck drivers are union members and will refrain from crossing a picket line if asked. The Strike Committee may have negotiated with police to set specific times for deliveries or crossing lines.

Repeated crossing of lines by trucks or busloads of replacement workers should be reported immediately to Local Strike Headquarters and plans made to deal with them. Note all vehicle licence numbers and find ways to identify the reason for their entry.

Police relations

One of the first tasks of the Strike Duties sub-committee is to contact the local police. Police will be interested in reducing the possibility of violence on the picket lines.

Many police forces have special labour dispute squads and publish guides on the legal aspects of picketing in the community.

Set up an official meeting with the appropriate police force.

Inform the police that we want to maintain orderly and peaceful picket lines, but our members will not tolerate continuous crossing of the lines by replacement workers or managers.

The best way to ensure a peaceful picket line may be to set definite times when managers will be allowed to cross the lines. Make it clear that these times must be as short as possible – no more than 10 minutes at the beginning of a shift. Inform all Picket Captains of the times and the rules.

Normally, if pickets conduct themselves in an orderly manner there will be no police interference with our picket lines. However, managers, an over-zealous police officer or a security guard may attempt to harass the pickets.

Our response should be non-abusive but firm: We have the right to legally picket the premises. Any serious harassment by police or security guards should be reported immediately to Local Strike Headquarters so that police officials can be contacted. Note all names and badge numbers.

Rules for pickets

By picketing, we protect our jobs, build our own unity, and send a message to management and the community.

Misconduct on the picket line by a few individuals could cause us to be hit with court injunctions and damage our image in the community.

The Picket Captain has the authority to enforce these rules, and to remove anyone who does not follow them:

- Report to the Picket Captain when you arrive and when you leave.
- Be on time. If each group of pickets arrives on

Know your rights: What to do if you are arrested

Chances are none of us will be charged as a result of a labour dispute. However, the Strike Committee must be prepared to contact a lawyer immediately should any members be arrested.

If arrested, follow seven basic rules:

- Offer no resistance, either physical or verbal.
- Don't make oral or written statements to the arresting officers.
- Request that someone inform Local Strike Headquarters immediately. OPSEU will provide legal counsel.
- Go along to the police station and correctly identify yourself: name, address and phone number.
- Refuse to answer any questions other than those regarding identity.
- Request to see a lawyer and ask why you have been arrested.
- Keep cool, regardless of the tactics used by police.

As a rule, a person arrested is released in a few hours after signing a "promise to appear" in court. Ideally, a lawyer should read it before you sign it; if no lawyer is available immediately, read the document carefully: it should specify the charge against you and the date of the alleged offence.

No one should be detained more than 24 hours without a court appearance; however, it could be longer on weekends.

time, then everyone will be able to leave on time as well.

- Don't leave your post until the next group is there to relieve you.
- Carry or wear a sign, taking turns resting.
- Dress should be casual but neat. Wear comfortable clothing and shoes, and be prepared for the weather. Do not carry anything that could be labelled as a potential weapon, even a pen, pencil or penknife. Waist pouches are more comfortable than a purse on a picket line.
- Maintain a strong picket line, but don't obstruct public use of the sidewalk or roadway.
- Talk to people who cross the line and try to convince them to support the strike. Think about what would convince you if you were in their shoes.
- Refer all strangers, media, employer representatives or police to the Picket Captain, even if they appear friendly. Statements made by uninformed pickets may be used against the union in court or reported in the media.
- Report any unusual incidents to the Picket Captain, who in turn makes reports to Strike Headquarters.
- If rumours threaten to disrupt the picket line, ask the Picket Captain to check them out with Local Strike Headquarters.
- Rotate rest periods so the line is always strong.

Trespassing

We have the right to picket on public property such as sidewalks, laneways and driveways leading to public roadways. Managers, security guards or the police may attempt to intimidate or threaten pickets who are on adjacent private property. Under law, only the actual property owner can lay a trespassing charge; however, the property owner may have designated an agent.

- Do not enter the struck facility for any reason.
- There will be no drugs, no alcohol, no weapons, and no violence on the picket line.

Remember:

No oral or written statements to police.

Remain calm.

Ask for a lawyer.

Strike Finance sub-committee

OPSEU strike policy says that the Strike Finance sub-committee shall:

- make sure that strike pay, and advances for strike administration are administered and accounted for in accordance with OPSEU policy;
- make sure that Form E (Weekly Administration Expense Record) is completed and submitted regularly to the assigned OPSEU staff representative for approval, with original receipts/invoices attached;
- when the strike is over, submit to the assigned OPSEU staff representative a completed Form F (Final Account of Strike Fund) reconciling advances received and expenditures made during the strike; and
- when the strike is over, provide a full report to the next General Membership Meeting of the Local on all strike finances.

This committee is also responsible for troubleshooting, welfare, fund raising and scrounging. It is often headed by the Local Treasurer.

Local strike preparation

After the membership has voted to strike and before a strike starts, each Local must set up its strike accounting structure.

- Make sure each member fills out and signs Form B (Member Personal Information Form); otherwise, they can't get strike pay.
- Complete Form A (Application for Strike Administration Advance) and submit it to the Regional Office for approval by the OPSEU staff representative, who will forward it to the Accounting Unit (Accounting) at OPSEU Head Office.

- Designate or set up a bank account for strike administration purposes. (This account will be used for local administration costs only. Strike pay will be handled through a separate account set up by Accounting.)
- For the local strike administration, designate at least two members of the Strike Committee or Strike Finance Sub-Committee as cheque-signing officers, who must sign a bank signature card from the institution where the account was opened.

Upon receipt of the completed Form A, Accounting will forward a start-up advance of $1,500 to the Strike Committee or Strike Finance Sub-Committee to use for strike administration.

Locals that have submitted an up-to-date Trustee's Audit Report to Accounting can receive an extra quarterly rebate cheque at the start of the strike. This money may be used for strike expenses not covered below.

Head office will set up the local strike pay accounts. Before this can happen:

- The Local must designate at least two members of the Strike Finance sub-committee as cheque signing officers. (The local can assign up to five signatories. For large Locals this is a good idea - there will be a lot of cheques to sign!)
- Each signatory must complete a bank signature card and return it to Accounting with a photocopy of two pieces of ID - one with a photo. (DO NOT submit credit cards as a form of ID.)

After these steps are completed accounting will set up the strike pay account and deposit the appropriate funds into it.

Strike Administration

Where do I get all the necessary forms?

All administration forms are at the back of the strike manual or can be reproduced at the local level on software supplied by OPSEU head office.

What costs are covered for strike administration?

Accounting will reimburse locals for the following strike administration expenses:

- appropriate strike headquarters and/or strike trailer rentals, if approved by the OPSEU staff representative;
- hydro hook-up or electricity generator, and generator fuel;
- portable toilets, where necessary;
- land-based telephone lines and related charges; and
- cell phone usage charges, where appropriate.

In exceptional cases, expenses not listed above may be reimbursed, if they are authorized by an OPSEU staff representative first, and if they are approved by Accounting prior to the expenditure being incurred.

All strike expenses must be supported by original receipts or invoices. Expenses must be reasonable and/or be the low-cost option.

Running strike finances

1. Each striking Local must regularly forward a completed Form E (Weekly Administration Expense Record) to the assigned OPSEU staff representative for approval.

This form must be signed by a member of the Strike Committee or Strike Finance sub-committee and accompanied by:

- original supporting receipts/invoices;
- cheque stubs for all issued cheques; and
- cheque and stubs for all voided cheques.

Your local won't receive any additional strike funds until Accounting receives the completed Form E with accompanying documentation.

2. Locals must keep copies of all strike administration forms and supporting documentation such as receipts, disbursements, paid invoices, etc.
3. Strike Committees must refer issues arising from lost, stolen or stale-dated cheques to Accounting.

Who gets strike pay?

Members who perform a minimum of four or more hours of strike duty per day, or a minimum of 20 or more hours per week, are eligible for strike pay.

It's important to ensure that everyone who is receiving strike pay has signed a union card. People often assume, mistakenly, that because dues are deducted from their pay they are union members. Non-members are not entitled to receive strike pay.

Members who are partial load employees shall receive the same strike pay as members working full time, based on their hours of picket duty.

Note: A member who works for two employers represented by OPSEU, and is on strike against both at once, does not receive double strike pay.

To receive strike pay and benefits, members must fill out Form B and submit it to the Strike Finance sub-committee.

Form B should be filled out for each member ahead of the strike deadline.

Can a member do their picket duty at another local?

A member may apply to perform strike duties at a Local other than his or her own by filling out the appropriate section of Form B and it is approved by both the home local and receiving local. The application will be approved if:

- the member's Strike Committee approves the release of the member to perform strike duties at another location (such approval shall not be denied unreasonably); and
- the member finds a receiving Local that agrees to assign strike duties.

The receiving Local will only accept a member from another Local upon receipt of a completed and signed Form B. Once accepted, the member will be treated as a member of the receiving Local for the assignment of strike duties and payment of strike pay.

What happens after the strike is over and a member isn't called back right away?

After the strike is over, any eligible members awaiting recall to work may continue to earn strike pay until they return to work, to a maximum of two weeks' strike pay.

In such a case, strike pay is dependent upon the performance of "clean-up" duties, if any, assigned by the Strike Committee.

How much is strike pay?

Strike pay is as follows:

	Member	Each dependant
Weeks 1- 3 daily max	$ 25	$ 4
Weeks 1- 3 weekly max	$ 125	$ 20
Weeks 4+ daily max	$ 40	$ 4
Weeks 4+ weekly max	$ 200	$ 20

NOTE: only members who have completed three weeks of picket duty are entitled to an increase in strike pay.

Who is responsible for handling disputes over strike pay?

Disputes over entitlement to daily strike pay may be appealed to the Strike Committee, whose decision shall be final and binding.

Who qualifies as a dependent?

A dependent is:

- a non-income-earning spouse (excluding a spouse on strike);
- a child under 18 (or under 26 if attending school full time) OR a dependent child as defined by the collective agreement or the benefit plan;
- a disabled family member; or
- an elderly family member who normally receives financial support from the striking member.

If both spouses are on strike, both may claim the dependents.

How to administer strike pay

Accounting will distribute funds for strike pay to the Strike Committee or Strike Finance sub-committee upon receipt of:

- a completed Form C (Strike Register);
- completed bank signature cards with necessary ID; and
- a completed Form B for each Local member who is requesting strike pay and benefits.

At the end of each week, Picket Captains must deliver a completed and signed Form D (Strike Duty Performance and Payment Register) to their Strike Finance sub-committee.

Strike pay is earned daily but paid weekly. The weekly maximum shall be no more than five days of strike pay.

Note: Strike pay is earned daily and paid if, and only if, the strike lasts for more than one day. A strike which lasts one day or less does not entitle members to strike pay. However, if the strike lasts for more than one day, strike pay is retroactive to the first day strike duties are performed.

Locals are authorized to issue strike pay to members who are registered for strike duties and/or accommodation.

Strike pay cheques cannot be used to provide supplementary strike pay. Any strike pay provided to members that is above and beyond the amount dictated by OPSEU policy must be paid for entirely by the Local.

Bargaining team members are assigned their strike duties by the team chair as opposed to the local, with strike pay dependent upon performance of such duties. Strike pay for bargaining team members will be issued through their home local, upon authorization by the bargaining team chair.

For strike purposes, a week is seven consecutive calendar days. The first day of the strike is the first day of Week One.

The first strike pay cheque must not be issued until seven days after the beginning of the strike. Thereafter, strike pay cheques may be issued on a weekly or bi-weekly basis.

The Strike Committee or Strike Finance sub-committee must enter all member hours approved on the weekly Form Ds into the strike database for calculating and printing cheques.

If using OPSEU's strike database program, a copy must be sent electronically to Accounting (strikeforms@opseu.org) at the end of each week to ensure the appropriate funds are transferred to your strike pay account. If operating manually, submit all completed and signed Form Ds (Strike Duty Performance and Payment Register) to the assigned staff representative at the end of each week.

What benefits are covered by OPSEU during a strike?

OPSEU will pay for basic life and health insurance benefits for members on strike who would normally receive these benefits while at work. These benefits will include:

- basic life insurance as per the collective agreement;
- Long Term Disability protection; and
- drug coverage as per the collective agreement.

OPSEU will also supply benefit coverage for any member who is off on a pre-existing disability claim who has had his or her coverage terminated as a result of a strike in his or her workplace.

Scrounging and fundraising

Money, goods and services can be obtained if the right people are on the scrounging committee.

The Local has a broad mandate to raise funds for the strike, acquiring goods or services that will save administrative costs and some money for members and their families.

Form a scrounging committee to solicit aid from other OPSEU locals, other unions and any organizations in your community who might support you or be sympathetic to the strikers' situation.

Examples of some contributions to past strikes:

- Money for the strike fund from other locals, unions and individuals;
- Bottled water, food vouchers, etc. from unionized grocery store locals;
- Coffee or end of day muffins, donuts from local donut shops.

Head Office can issue appeals through the Ontario Federation of Labour (OFL), the National Union of Public and General Employees (NUPGE) and the Canadian Labour Congress (CLC) if the strike is a long one.

The scrounging committee should approach the local labour council, as well as OPSEU area councils, for assistance. Members of other unions in the community can be asked to appeal to their fellow workers and take up a collection where they work.

It's a good idea to build up some kind of "credit rating" in advance of a strike by joining labour councils and by assisting other unions with their labour disputes by making donations, joining their picket lines and similar actions. If it's too late for that, be sure to reciprocate in strike support for other organizations after you are back at work.

Scrounging committees might arrange the loan of a camper van, a microwave or large coffee pot for strike headquarters, games and materials if there's a strike daycare centre. Cookies, coffee, sandwiches, or canned goods can come in handy and can be scrounged by the committee, as well as clothing or children's presents if the strike is likely to last over Christmas.

Locate a supply of burning barrels and a good source of scrap lumber to keep pickets warm in cold weather.

What needs to be done once the strike is over?

No later than two months after the end of the strike, the Local must:

- complete and return Form F to Accounting;
- pay all bills arising from the strike;
- provide a full account for all funds received, with supporting documentation, to Accounting;
- submit all reports, with supporting documents, to Accounting for review;
- return, to Accounting, any portion of the $1,500 start up advance that has not been accounted for; and
- provide a full report on strike finances to a

General Membership Meeting.

Accounting will hold back quarterly rebates for each Local until the Local has submitted all original strike forms and/or all advances have been returned.

Note: If the Local hasn't sent in its accounts after three rebates have been withheld, OPSEU may start the process of putting the local into trusteeship as outlined in the Constitution.

Hardship Relief

Who is responsible for administering the hardship fund?

Upon receiving a request for hardship relief, the Local Strike Committee shall set up a Hardship Relief Committee. This committee shall have two or more members.

This work requires tact, diplomacy and good business sense. The role of the members on this committee, is to assess need and advise members experiencing financial problems.

Counsellors should also be able to recognize signs that a member may require other kinds of assistance. Local members who have taken the Union Counsellor course or have a similar background have useful skills for this work.

The names of members requesting hardship relief are to be kept strictly confidential. To maintain confidentiality, the Hardship Relief

Area Coordinating Group and central resources

Where they exist, Area Coordinating Groups shall coordinate local hardship relief fundraising efforts and channel funds to the neediest members in the area.

The union may collect money centrally for hardship relief, but central union funds shall not be used for this purpose. Money collected centrally will be distributed to Area Coordinating Groups and/or Strike Committees for use by their Hardship Relief Committees.

After the strike is over, unused funds collected for hardship relief shall be used to support other strikes by OPSEU members or other unionized workers.

Committee shall set up a separate bank account. Two members of the committee shall have signing authority over the account.

The Hardship Relief Committee shall:

- administer and/or solicit donations for hardship relief;
- notify local financial institutions that a strike is in progress, and that loan applications and requests for payment deferrals may be forthcoming;
- act, where appropriate, on behalf of members who are unable to meet credit obligations and ask for help from the Vice-President's Office where necessary; and
- report to the Strike Committee on funds collected and paid out for hardship relief.

Who can receive hardship funds?

Being on strike is a financial hardship, but not all striking members are equally well-equipped to handle this hardship. The Strike Committee may provide these members with extra help over and above strike pay. This is called "hardship relief."

The normal hardships of being on strike do not qualify a member for hardship relief.

To qualify for hardship relief, a member must first have exhausted all other reasonable options.

Budgeting for a strike

We can't live on strike pay: it's designed to help us supplement savings and other sources of income during a dispute. The union puts aside a percentage of membership dues towards a Strike Fund. While this fund is in the millions, the amount per member is not large when large bargaining units are on strike.

No union could sustain a strike of any length if it was to make up the total wage loss of its members.

That means every member should plan ways to get through the difficult times ahead. Members should be advised to put aside extra for mortgages and rent, and postpone major purchases. Delaying mortgage payments can be arranged with banks and credit unions.

Only members who register for strike duties and perform picket or other strike duties will receive strike pay. Members who choose not to do strike duties will not receive any pay.

Tips for members:

- Mortgages and rents. Talk to the bank or credit union and negotiate a plan for the duration before the next payment is due.
- Taxes. Ask if an accommodation can be arranged to defer property taxes.
- Utilities. request to spread your payments.
- Loans. If your lender won't allow a deferral, consider refinancing to reduce the payments.
- Credit cards. Charging purchases while on strike is not recommended, but pay the minimum charge or use a line of credit with lower interest.
- Insurance. Investigate ways to spread out the premiums.
- Child support. Contact your ex-spouse and try to work something out.

Special problems

Many community agencies can provide assistance to members in time of dire need. In most communities, at least some agencies deal with job finding, assistance for food, shelter, clothing and heat, and child welfare.

Striking members trained in counselling on these matters should be enlisted to assist with hardship cases.

Communications sub-committee

OPSEU strike policy says that the Communications sub-committee shall:

- keep members informed and up-to-date with current information and useful advice;
- share information with other OPSEU Locals, Area Coordinating Groups, and OPSEU Communications;
- provide information to and liaise with local labour bodies, community organizations, and the community at large; and
- handle relations with the local news media, e.g., planning news events, writing and distributing news releases and advisories, returning calls and answering questions from reporters, and leading letter-writing campaigns.

This committee can put out newsletters and leaflets to be distributed on picket lines. It also plans social events and general morale-boosting activities, and ensures that supporters get appropriate thank-you notes from the local.

At least one member of the committee should have Internet access and check the OPSEU website frequently for updates on bargaining and the progress of the strike in other locals.

OPSEU will have an information hotline updated regularly with the latest central information. You should consider setting up a local hotline with local updates to keep everyone informed. OPSEU will also produce a regular central strike newsletter.

Make sure the local media have the strike headquarters number as well as the home numbers of the designated spokespersons so they can be reached in off hours.

Our message to the media

We want to make sure that the union is speaking with one voice and not giving out inaccurate or contradictory information or opinions on the central issues of the strike.

Refer news reporters to Local Strike Headquarters, or to the Communications Department at OPSEU Head Office in Toronto (phone: 1-800-268-7376).

News reporters want local stories about how the strike is running in their area. This information can only be provided by local media spokespersons.

Helping news reporters

Local officials should meet well in advance with reporters who will be covering the strike or lockout to brief them on the issues and the bargaining process. Identify the labour reporters and education reporters, or call the city desk at the newspapers or the news director at a TV or radio station. Don't overlook the smaller community newspapers – they may prove to be our best allies.

- Give reporters the facts so they don't have to hunt for them. The easier we make their job, the better coverage we are likely to get.
- Before an interview or in planning a statement for a news release or news conference, try to develop a catchy way of expressing our main message so reporters can come away with the good, short quotes they need.
- If we want a reporter to cover a particular event such as a rally or community meeting, always call with an invitation. The news release we sent may have been lost or may not have stood out from others received.
- Ask reporters about schedules that are most convenient for them. For example, scheduling a news conference for late in the afternoon may be good for our members, but may come at time when most reporters must have already completed their stories.
- Don't lie and don't guess. Even if we get reporters to use inaccurate information once, eventually they will find out and be angry that we put them in an embarrassing position. If we don't know an answer, find out and get back to them.

- Don't assume that any statement is truly "off the record." A reporter's first loyalty is to "getting a story." That's what their boss pays them for. If we don't want to see a particular fact in print or on the air, don't give it to the media in the first place.
- Don't be upset that reporters report what the other side has to say. That's their job.
- Don't assume reporters understand anything about the labour movement. Offer to explain the basics. Do assume they are bright enough to understand what you tell them.
- Don't take a hostile approach or cut off contact with the reporter; that only hurts your chances of getting better coverage.
- Arrange for musicians to lead the crowd in singing before and after the speeches and, if appropriate, once or twice between speeches. (Don't have too many speeches.)
- Brainstorm ideas for chants ahead of time.
- Incorporate a short march into the event.
- Include among the speakers members of the unit and, if appropriate, members' spouses – all of whom can talk from the heart about what the contract means to them.
- Negotiate with speakers ahead of time about what they are going to say and set a limit on the time have to say it. For example, if politicians are going to speak, get their agreement that they will use the time to clearly endorse the union's position. Send a message to all the speakers by interrupting the first who runs over the pre-arranged time limit.

Tips for great rallies and demonstrations

Well-organized rallies can be one way to pressure the employer by demonstrating our solidarity and support from allies and by attracting public attention. Rallies also can boost group spirit by letting workers see proof of their strength in numbers.

However, rallies which are poorly attended and poorly run can be worse for morale than no action at all. A few tips for a successful event:

- Don't assume that people will come just because we gave them printed material advertising the event. Organize a network of on-the-job contacts or the phone tree to remind everyone.
- Involve members in making banners, signs, or other props ahead of time. Keep the message simple and in large enough type to read at a distance and to show up well in photographs or on TV.
- Consider balloons with slogans printed on them to make the event more spirited.
- Give people an opportunity to play an active role by singing, chanting, or marching. Otherwise, instead of feeling pumped up people may feel like they've watched someone else's rally on TV.
- Consider using humour to make some of the points that might otherwise be buried in serious speeches. For example, ask one of the members to dress up as the top management official and give a "speech" that parodies management's positions.
- Talk to local police well in advance about permits you may need.
- For a big rally, train marshals to keep order and help anyone who becomes ill or lost. Provide arm bands to identify the marshals.
- Test the sound system far enough in advance that you can get other equipment to the scene if something is not working.
- Make sure someone calls each media outlet and invites the appropriate reporter to attend. Offer to have a member meet the reporter at a particular time and place and stay with the reporter throughout the event to provide any necessary help such as identifying workers to interview or explaining something one of the speakers said.
- Arrange for someone to take pictures.
- End the rally with a clear statement of what the next step is and how people can get involved.

The strike deadline

The negotiating team sets the strike date and lets the locals know. A strike protocol may be negotiated, covering the logistics of how services will be withdrawn and other issues such as employee benefits. Its terms will also be distributed to locals.

Stewards and Picket Captains must know the precise time of the strike deadline to minimize confusion.

No member can go on a legal strike before official notification from the Negotiating Team.

If a strike or lock-out is called

Arrange that Picket Captains meet members as they come off the job.

If possible, arrange a large strike meeting somewhere near the work location or in a nearby hall you've rented.

For the first few hours, all members should be on the picket lines as a show of solidarity and strength.

Picket Captains should meet with or contact all members of their picket teams to confirm picket shift schedules.

Back-to-work protocol

After a strike or lockout, the bargaining team will negotiate a "back-to-work protocol" with the Colleges. Usually in these agreements, the employer must agree to drop any discipline, legal actions or other sanctions against union members. The protocol also covers pension, benefits and seniority issues. Outstanding criminal charges may have to be dealt with at a later court appearance.

Reasonable deadlines will be set for an orderly return to work.

The last word...

Whether or not you've been forced to strike or been locked out, everyone who fully participated in strike preparation and action has acted in solidarity with his or her union sisters and brothers.

Whatever the outcome, you can be satisfied that you have undertaken the best possible defence of your members and your collective agreement.
